Transit Accessible Locations: Social Service/Health Care and Transit Coordination

TASK 2. Memorandum

Task 2. Transit Accessibility of Social Service and Health Care Facilities in Alameda and Contra Costa Counties.

This memorandum evaluates the accessibility of social service and health care facilities in the two subject counties. It contains a listing of the facilities, the mapping of the facilities in relation to quality of transit service, and an evaluation of those lacking adequate service. This report summarizes the methodology used for the selection of health care and social service facilities as well as the Geographic Information System (GIS) mapping.

It is important to start with an understanding of what constitutes health care and social service facilities, and how to define adequate levels of transit service.

Definitions

Facility Database

Different databases were examined to determine which to use to provide the GIS mapping. The North American Industry Classification System (NAICS) geographic database generated by California Employment Development Department (EDD) and state licensing data from the California Office of Statewide Health Planning and Development (OSHPD) were utilized for generating the GIS mapping. The North American Industry Classification System (NAICS) is the standard used by Federal statistical agencies in classifying business establishments for the purpose of collecting, analyzing, and publishing statistical data related to the U.S. business economy. NAICS was developed under the auspices of the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) in conjunction with Canada and Mexico, and adopted in 1997 to replace the older Standard Industrial Classification system (SIC).

http://www.census.gov/cgi-bin/sssd/naics/naicsrch?chart_code=62&search=2007%20NAICS%20Search

The classification system uses two digit categories which branch down to six digits with greater specification of use. For example, 22 includes all utilities, 52 represents finance and insurance, 61 equals educational services, and 62 represents jobs in health care and social assistance. The facilities selected to map are in the 62 category but a sub-set of the data was selected to exclude sub-categories of doctor's or dentists offices and child care facilities. Per prior discussion and approval, the following uses were selected:

- 6214 Outpatient Care Centers
- 622 Hospitals
- 623 Nursing and Residential Care Facilities
- 6241 Individual and Family Services
- 6242 Community Food and Housing, and Emergency and Other Relief Services
- 6243 Vocational Rehabilitation Services

The second facility database utilized was generated by the California Healthcare Atlas created by the California Office of Statewide Health Planning and Development. It provides an internet GIS mapping application that allows users to find information about hospitals and health care facilities in the state. While it provides more accurate information on specific facilities than the NAICS database, including addresses, the OSHPD data does not include social service facilities.

Confidentiality requirements required that MTC staff analyze the NAICS data for the study. Discussion with staff at California EDD brought the reliability of the data into question, particularly with regard to governmental offices. EDD staff mentioned that the federal government is in category 10, state government in category 20, and local government in category 30. These are not listed on the list of NAICS definitions and an MTC test of the data showed it to be missing. Thus, VA Hospitals and County Social Service facilities were manually added to the database.

Working with both databases, sample lists of facilities in Berkeley and Martinez were used to test the quality of the information. Table 2.1 shows the number of facilities in the two counties, and because the number is so large, the table also shows a sub-set of facilities that have 10 employees or more. While it would be desirable to map all facilities, 1,448 facilities are too many to map in order to evaluate the quality of transit access, so it was determined to limit the mapping to those employing 10 or more people. There are also other limitations of the data, such as including administrative offices which do not serve the public in a few cases, and also poorly classified facilities such as a listing of a hospital for a facility that represents medical “back office” functions that produce equipment or products used by patients but are not visited by patients.

Table 2.1. Health Care and Social Service Facilities in Alameda & Contra Costa Counties: NAICS Database

NAICS Category	Description	# of facilities in Alameda & Contra Costa Counties	# of facilities in Alameda & Contra Costa Counties with 10+ employees
6214	Outpatient Care Centers	157	118
622	Hospitals	60	44
623	Nursing & Residential Care	658	255
6241	Individual & Family Services	406	165
6242	Community Food & Housing Emergency & other Relief Services	81	30
6243	Vocational Rehabilitation Services	86	36
Totals		1,448	648

The conclusion from the analysis of the data is that the quality of the GIS data is not perfect but represents the best geographic information on health care and social service facilities in the two counties that can be developed without a separate time and budget consuming process that would preclude the accomplishment of the study objectives – namely to get an understanding of the degree to which transit availability is a problem for resident access.

Other databases considered include the county listings developed as part of the “211” information system. While these provide extensive lists of services for the two counties, the data is not geo-coded and thus would require extensive manipulation and analysis. The “211” data provides information on various social service facilities but does not appear to include all the medical facilities.

Transit Accessibility

A key issue is to determine what is meant by transit accessible. It is difficult to use the same standard in Oakley as Oakland, Brentwood as Berkeley, or Moraga as Martinez.

Frequency of service, proximity, and need to transfer buses to access a destination are the usual measures of transit accessibility. One bus every hour passing a site would not be defined as accessible in the urban core area served by AC Transit (some trunk routes operate every six to 10 minutes) but in some areas of Central Contra Costa or Eastern portions of both counties that may be standard of service on many routes, with only a site located near a hub of multiple routes such as a transit center, park and ride lot, or BART Station receiving higher levels of transit service. Proximity needs to be considered as a factor as well. One quarter mile or a five-10 minute walk is generally considered the standard for proximity. A greater walk distance to transit is acceptable to some people, but should not be used as a standard for people accessing medical services.

Urban transit services operate at frequencies so that a transfer should not impose a large time penalty, and suburban transit often uses a hub and spoke system bringing multiple routes to a single timed transfer location – such as at a BART Station. That should allow a patron to travel to multiple locations with no more than one transfer, but transfers do extend travel time and are not desirable.

Transit service is better on weekdays than it is on weekends, and express or commute services enhance basic service levels in some communities. While employee transit access is important, the focus of this study is access to facilities by clients, so the basic level of midday service was used to define transit accessibility. The issue of stop distance to a site and number of trips at a given stop were analyzed to develop an acceptable measure of transit service levels. The mapping isolated the areas located within a quarter mile of transit stops. A five color scale was created to map transit service levels and proximity – with the five categories as follow reflecting levels of transit service between 7AM and 7PM on weekdays. Most health care and social service facilities operate five days a week so weekday service frequencies are most important. However, weekend access to County medical centers and emergency rooms is important and should be considered for the primary hospitals.

Any site location more than a quarter mile from the closest transit stop was categorized as having no transit service, while the score of others reflects both distance from the stop (proximity) and frequency of service so a less frequent level of service stopping adjacent to a site might yield a score equivalent to more frequent service 1,000 feet from the site. An October baseline of transit service was used for the analysis.

The classification of transit access utilized the following breakdown, with the first four categories measuring the level of service within a ¼ mile and the fifth yielding those facilities beyond a ¼ from the closest bus stop.

- Orange (excellent transit service): three or more routes running at 30 minute frequencies or better.
- Yellow (good transit service): two bus routes running at 30 minute frequencies, or 4 at 60 minute frequencies.
- Light blue (adequate transit service): one route running at 30 minute frequencies, or two at 60 minute frequencies.
- Purple (inadequate transit service): one route running at 60 minute frequency or less service.
- Grey (inadequate transit service): no transit service within ¼ mile.

The objectives for Lifeline Transit service laid out in the 2001 Regional Transportation Plan were considered to measure acceptable levels of transit. These set a goal of 30 minute headways during midday, night, and weekend service, and 15 minutes for AC Transit and 30 minutes for other Alameda and Contra Costa operators during the peak commute periods. Discussion at the Technical Advisory Committee suggested this was an unreasonable objective, since none of the transit operators in the two counties can currently afford to operate this level of service. As an example, Cindy Dahlgren of Central Contra Costa Transit Authority indicated that the agency's operating budget would need to be $5 million higher per year to achieve this level of service.

Findings

As shown by the accompanying tables, the majority of the medical and social service facilities in Alameda or Contra Costa Counties had adequate or excellent transit service. Using the larger database (Table 2.2) which includes social service facilities, only 12% or 81 of the 648 sites had inadequate transit service, defined as no service or less than one bus every 30 minutes stopping within a ¼ mile between 7AM and 7PM. Of those so categorized, 30 are in the AC Transit service area and 51 or 63% are in areas served by the other transit districts operating in Alameda and Contra Costa Counties. Almost all of the medical and social service facilities receiving excellent transit service are in the AC Transit area (189 of 192) that is much more urbanized, has a larger low income population, and receives higher levels of transit service. This does not indicate that medical and social service facilities in the AC Transit District are better located than in the suburban areas, but that the higher levels of transit service generated the results. However, at the other end of the spectrum, only 6% or 30 facilities had inadequate or no transit service in the AC Transit District, but 24% or 51 of 215 of the facilities in other areas had inadequate or no transit service.

	6%	6%	34%	24%	30%	100%

Using a second database of only medically related facilities licensed by the state, only 20 of 287 medical facilities had inadequate transit service, or 7%. Thirteen of them are Long Term Care facilities, six are clinics, and two are hospitals. Clearly the hospital and clinic facilities are of greater concern since they receive more daily clients and visitors. Most critical medical facilities receive an adequate level of transit service.

Hospital Specific Findings

Because Martinez, the County Seat in Contra Costa County, is relatively isolated from the majority of county population, and particularly pockets of low income communities in Western and Eastern Contra Costa, both WestCAT and Tri Delta Transit make special trips outside their normal service area to the County Regional Medical Center and other County functional services in Martinez. The basic level of transit service to the facility by the Central Contra Costa Transit Authority includes two routes, an express service from Walnut Creek every 30 to 60 minutes and a local route from Concord and Pleasant Hill every 40 minutes. The transit accessibility ranking for this hospital is good transit service. However, if weekend service was evaluated, the result would be very different. Only one local route serves the hospital with trips every 75 to 150 minutes. In contrast, Highland Hospital, the Alameda County Medical Center, is rated as having excellent service, with service from three AC Transit routes, including a route from Emeryville to East Oakland every 12 minutes, a route from downtown Oakland every 20 to 30 minutes, and a connection to Fruitvale BART and West Oakland every 20 minutes. On weekends, these routes pass the hospital every 15, 60, and 30 minutes, respectively. Highland Hospital also has a direct shuttle service to and from the Lake Merritt BART Station during normal weekday operating hours.

Other hospitals with excellent transit service include the Washington Hospital and Kaiser Medical Center in Fremont. Both are located within a five minute walk to the BART Station which is the hub for six AC routes which operate every 30 minutes and an additional six routes that operate hourly during midday hours. In addition to BART and AC Transit, four routes from Santa Clara County VTA serve the BART Station.

Hospitals with marginally adequate service include John Muir Medical Center in Walnut Creek that has one hourly route and Eden Hospital in Castro Valley which has two routes serving the hospital every 30 to 60 minutes. The new Kaiser Foundation hospital located off Deer Valley in Antioch has inadequate to marginal service. While it only receives seven trips a day on one Tri Delta Transit route and 21 trips a day on a second route, it is less than two years old and was located on the urban fringe between Antioch and Brentwood anticipating future population growth. Kaiser also purchased the large site more than 10 years ago that should be sufficient for long-term expansion of facilities at the location.

Kindred Hospital in San Leandro is also isolated from transit service, being more than a ¼ mile from the closest AC Transit stop. This 99-bed facility specializes in long-term care so does not seem to have a large volume of out-patients. Several other facilities, including a surgery center and a long-term care facility are located in high income areas of Alamo and Danville which receive no transit service, while the VA Hospital in Livermore receives extremely limited transit service (two trips a day on LAVTA route 55).

Social Service Specific Findings

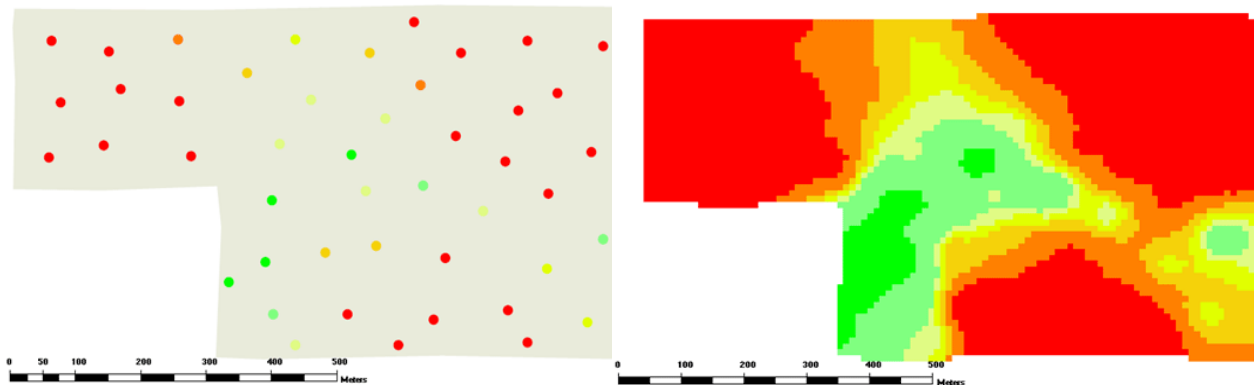

The three most heavily utilized Alameda County Social Service facilities are located at sites in Oakland and Hayward that receive excellent transit service. The Contra Costa County Social Service facility on MacDonald in Richmond also receives excellent transit service. However, other heavily utilized Contra Costa County Social Service facilities in Richmond, Hercules, Pleasant Hill, and Antioch receive inadequate or marginal levels of transit service.

From the findings and analysis, one goal in improving transit access to medical and social service facilities should focus on public and quasi-public clinics or services in communities that have significant low income and/or transit dependent populations who have limited or no other means of accessing these services.

The accompanying maps illustrate the location of the medical and social service facilities in the two counties with a color scale that shows the density of transit service. Six maps have been utilized to show the counties in sufficient detail. For presentation purposes, these maps will be printed at a scale to be readable. An additional map illustrates those census tracks with concentrations of low income and elderly population. The table in the appendix provides a listing of the facilities in the State OSHPD database.

Visual Depiction of Transit Density Methodology

Bus stops from the Regional Transit Database (provided by the MTC) were used to create a gridded index of transit service for Alameda and Contra Costa Counties. Local fixed route transit stops from the hours of 7am and 7pm were entered in a GIS. The stops that had more buses passing per hour were given more importance. These stops were buffered to a distance of a quarter mile radius, to create a circular area of accessibility. In some cases these buffers overlapped when two stops were within a quarter mile of each other, creating an even more accessible area.

The pictures above display a depiction of this process. The red stops had higher frequencies, so it displays as better service. These colors were branded as service levels. These service levels were evaluated anecdotally, to determine actual transit service levels on the ground. Using this colorized network, baseline transit service levels were determined and accessibility ranks were given to facilities based upon the underlying service level. This quantitative process was used to narrow down which underserved facilities to study further.

The accompanying six maps show the location of medical and social service facilities in relation to transit accessibility score for West Contra Costa County, Central Contra Costa County, Eastern Contra Costa County, the Livermore-Amador Valley, Southern Alameda County, and Western Alameda County. A separate map shows those neighborhoods with higher densities of low income and elderly population.

Transit Service Accessibility and Health/Social Services in the Livermore Amador Valley

Transit Service Accessibility and Health/Social Services in Eastern Contra Costa County

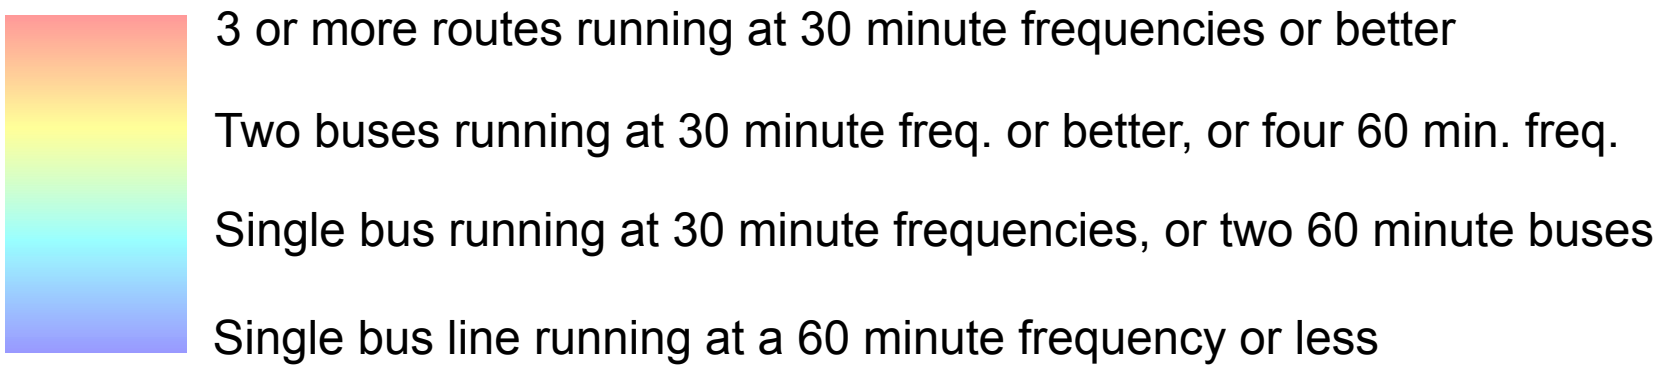

Transit Service Accessibility and Health/Social Services in Central Contra Costa County

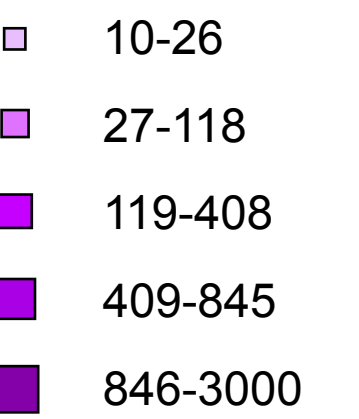

Transit Service Accessibility and Health/Social Services Western Contra Costa County

Transit Service and Proximity Levels

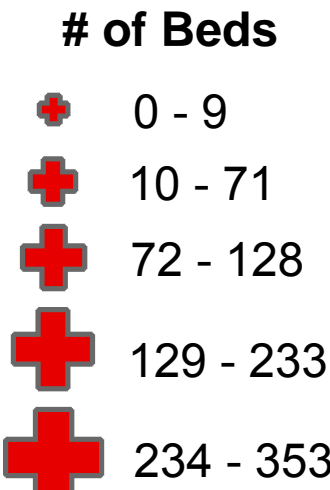

Note: Transit Service Levels based upon the MTC Regional Transit Database. This is a continually updated database that may not reflect recent service changes. In some cases, bus frequencies have been rounded up or down. Accessibility is determined by the number of buses passing a stop within 1/4 mile of any given point from 7 AM to 7 PM. Areas outside 1/4 mile of a transit stop are not considered accessible, and are not symbolized on this map. All other areas near stops are symbolized and weighted by higher frequencies, diminishing in accessibility to a 1/4 mile radius.

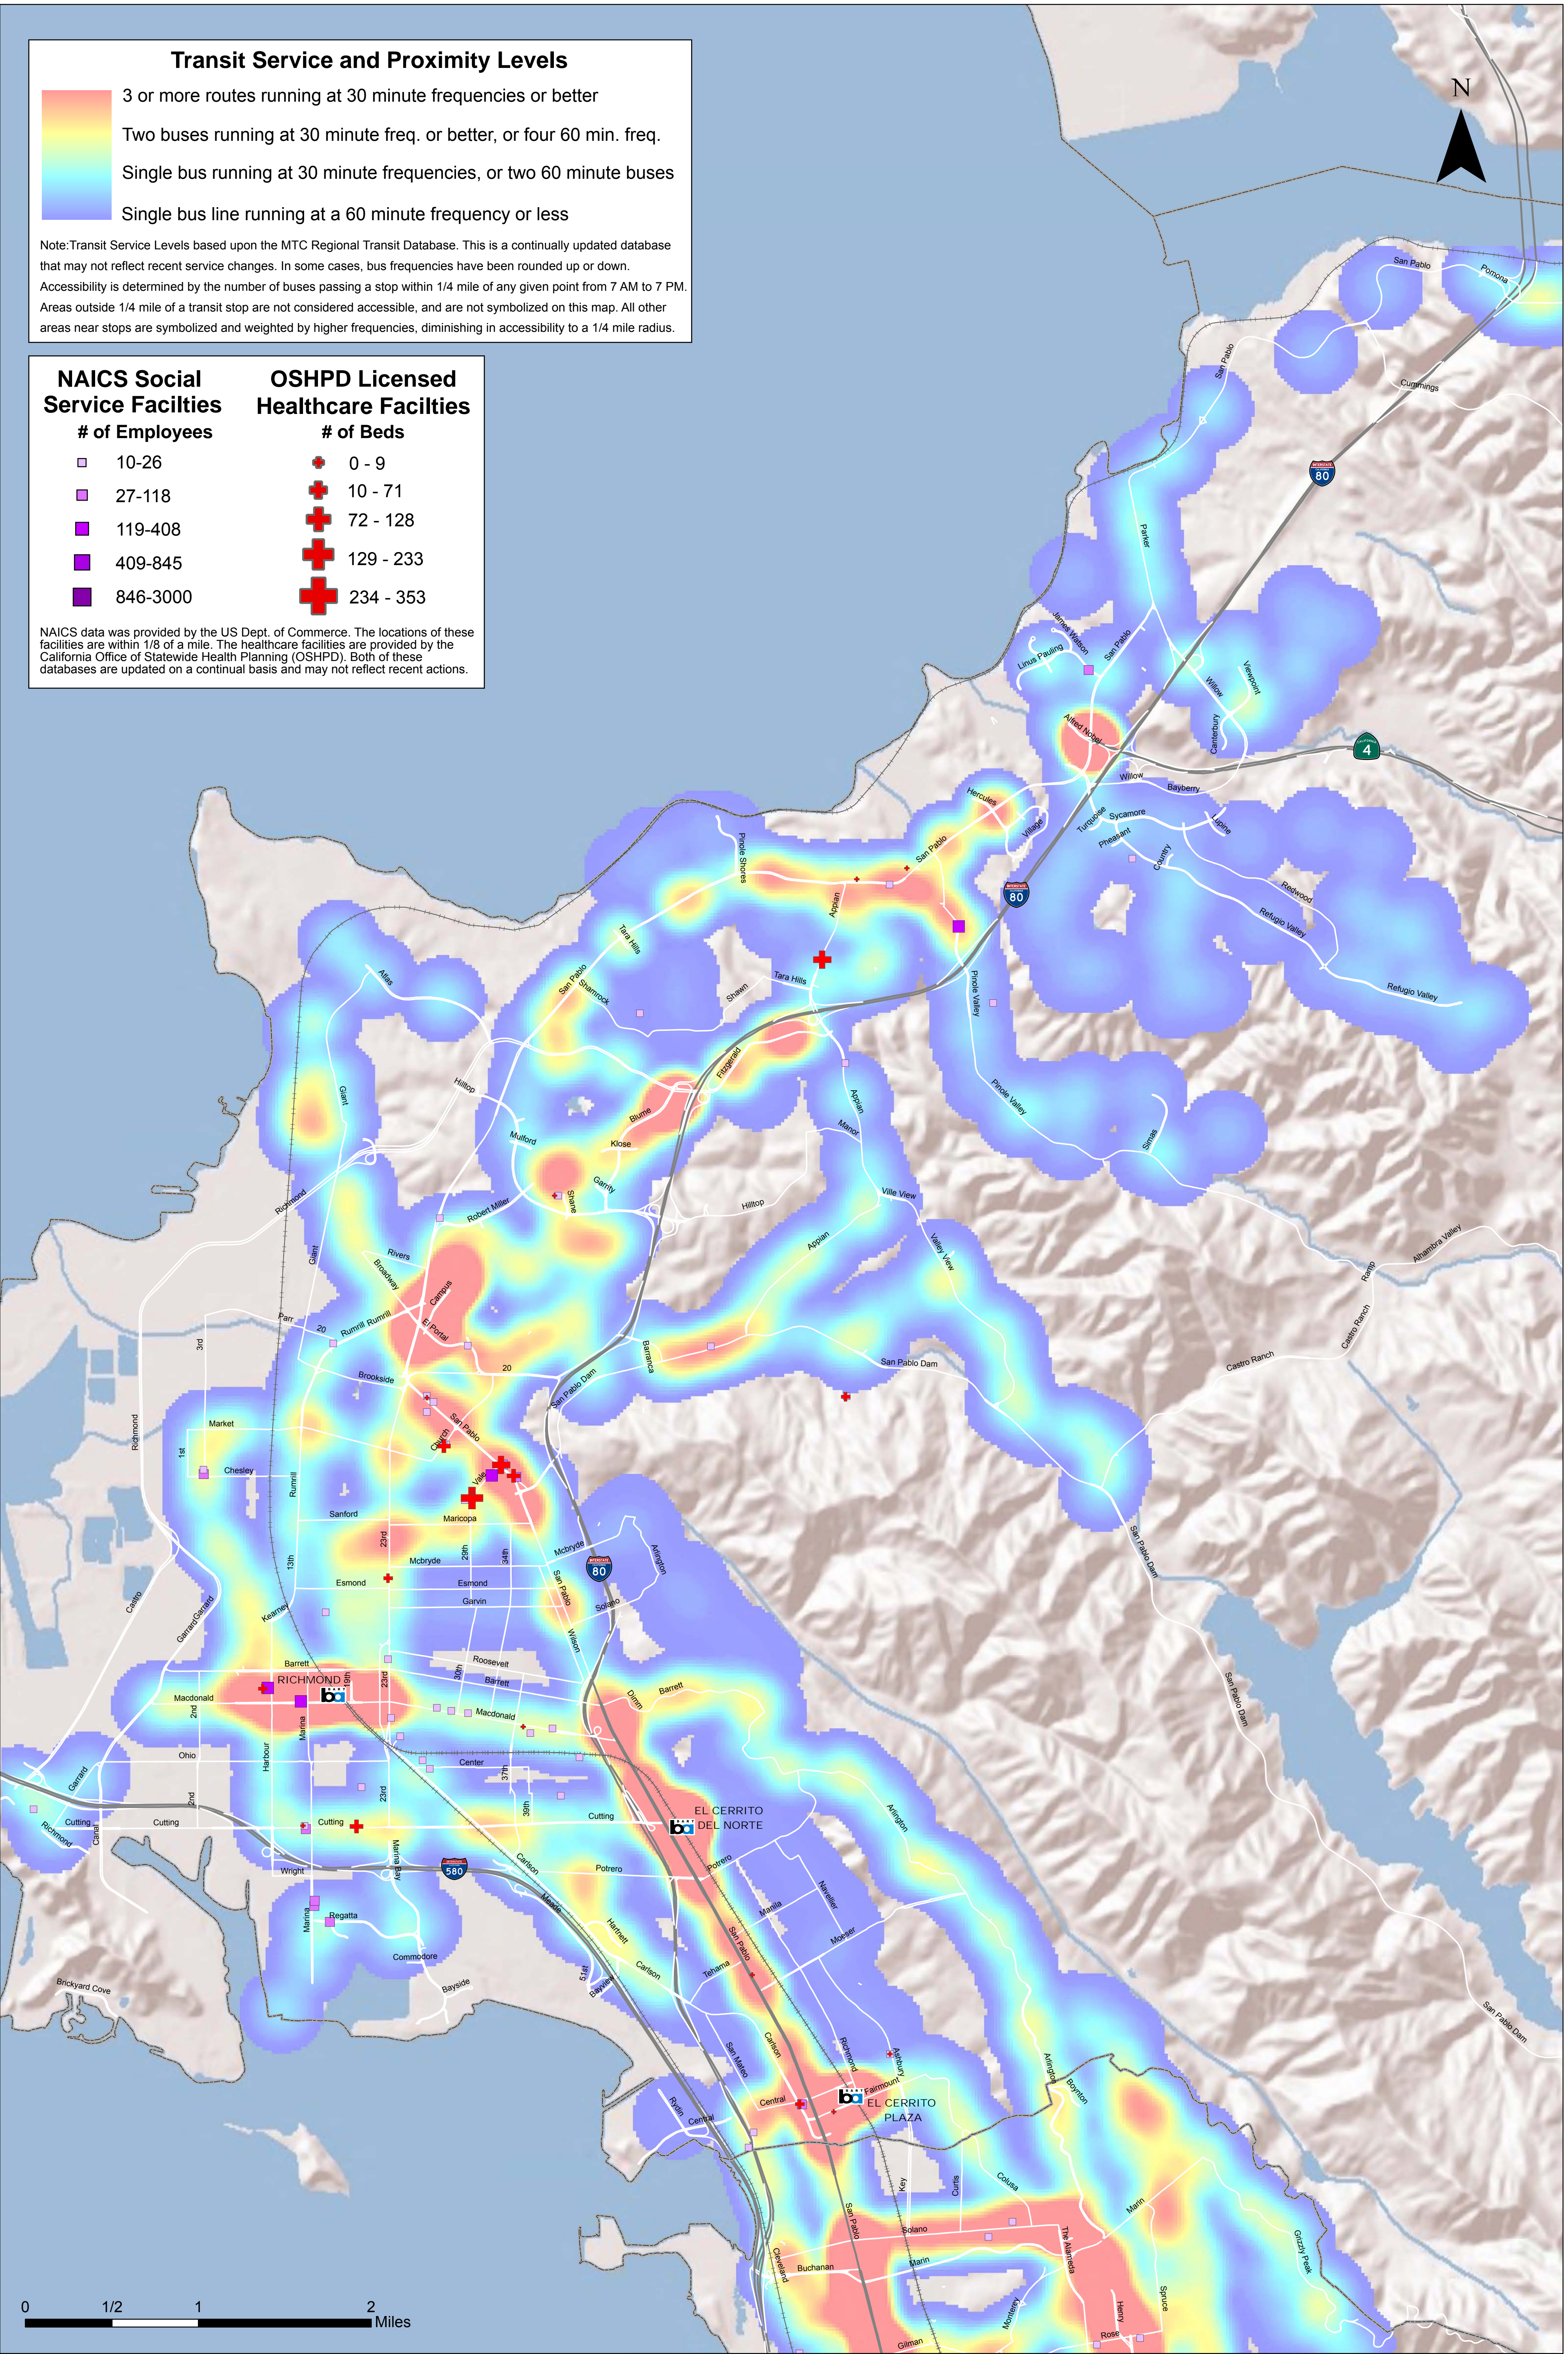

NAICS Social Service Facilities

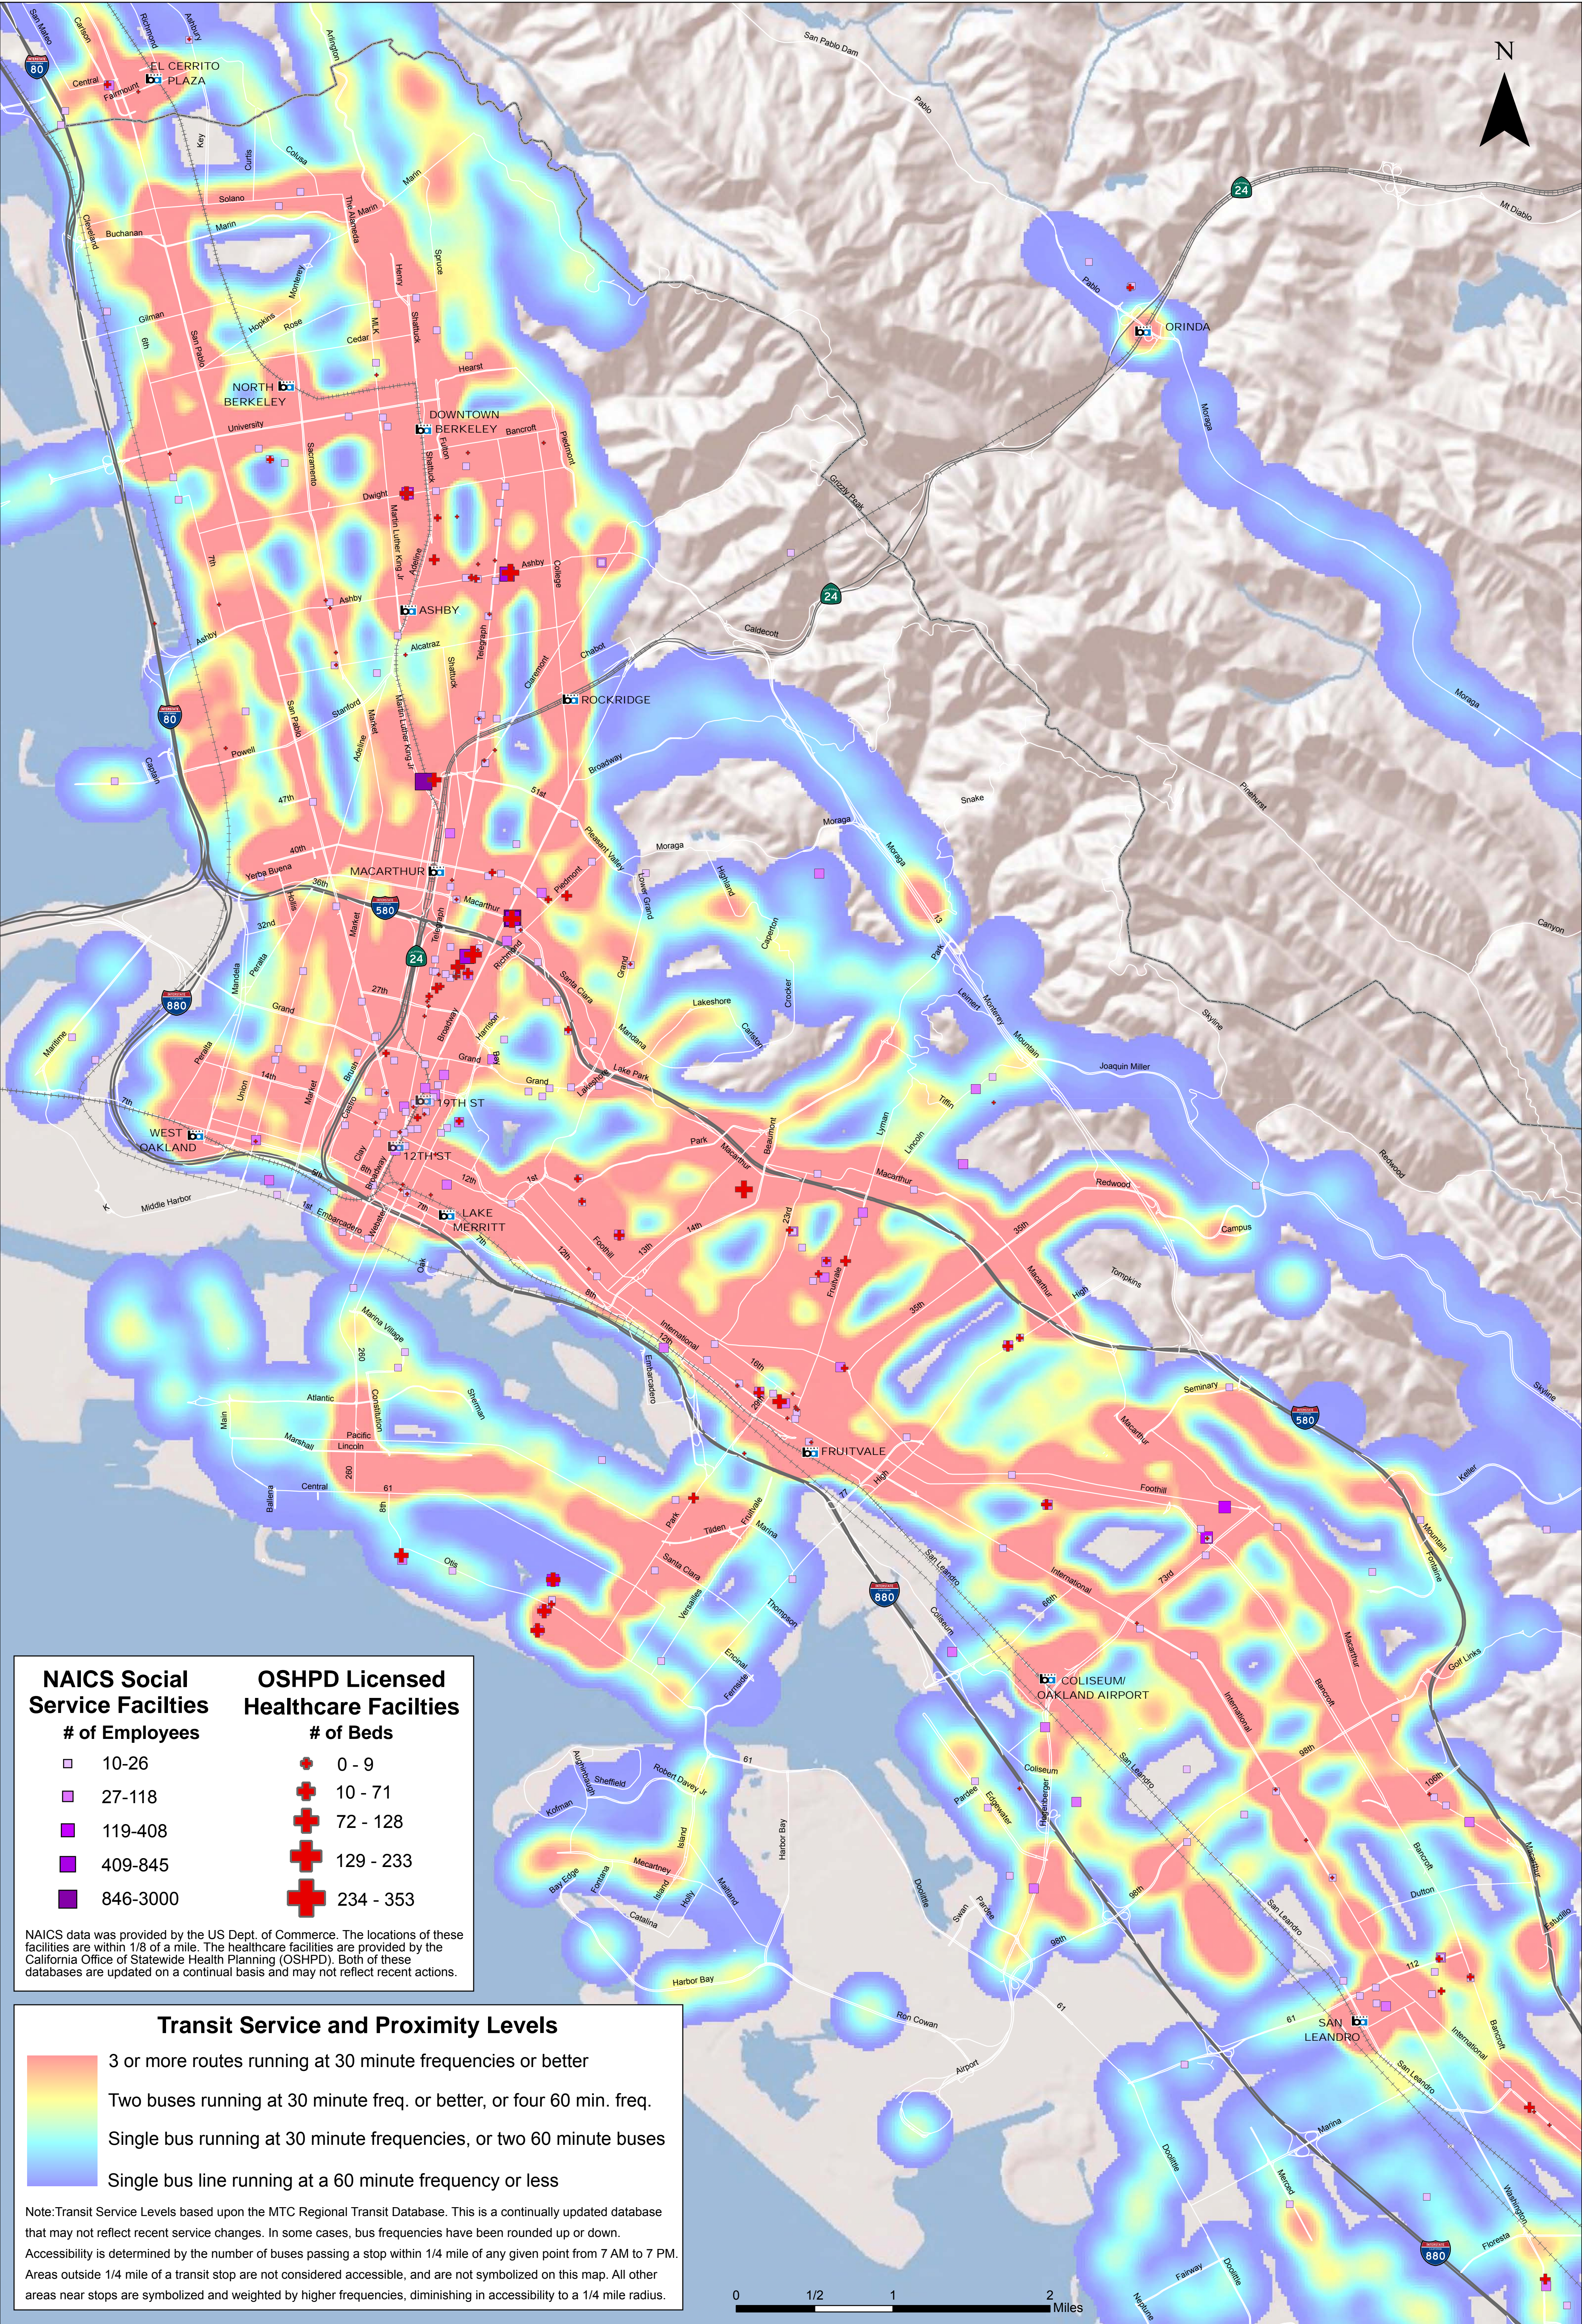

OSHPD Licensed Healthcare Facilities

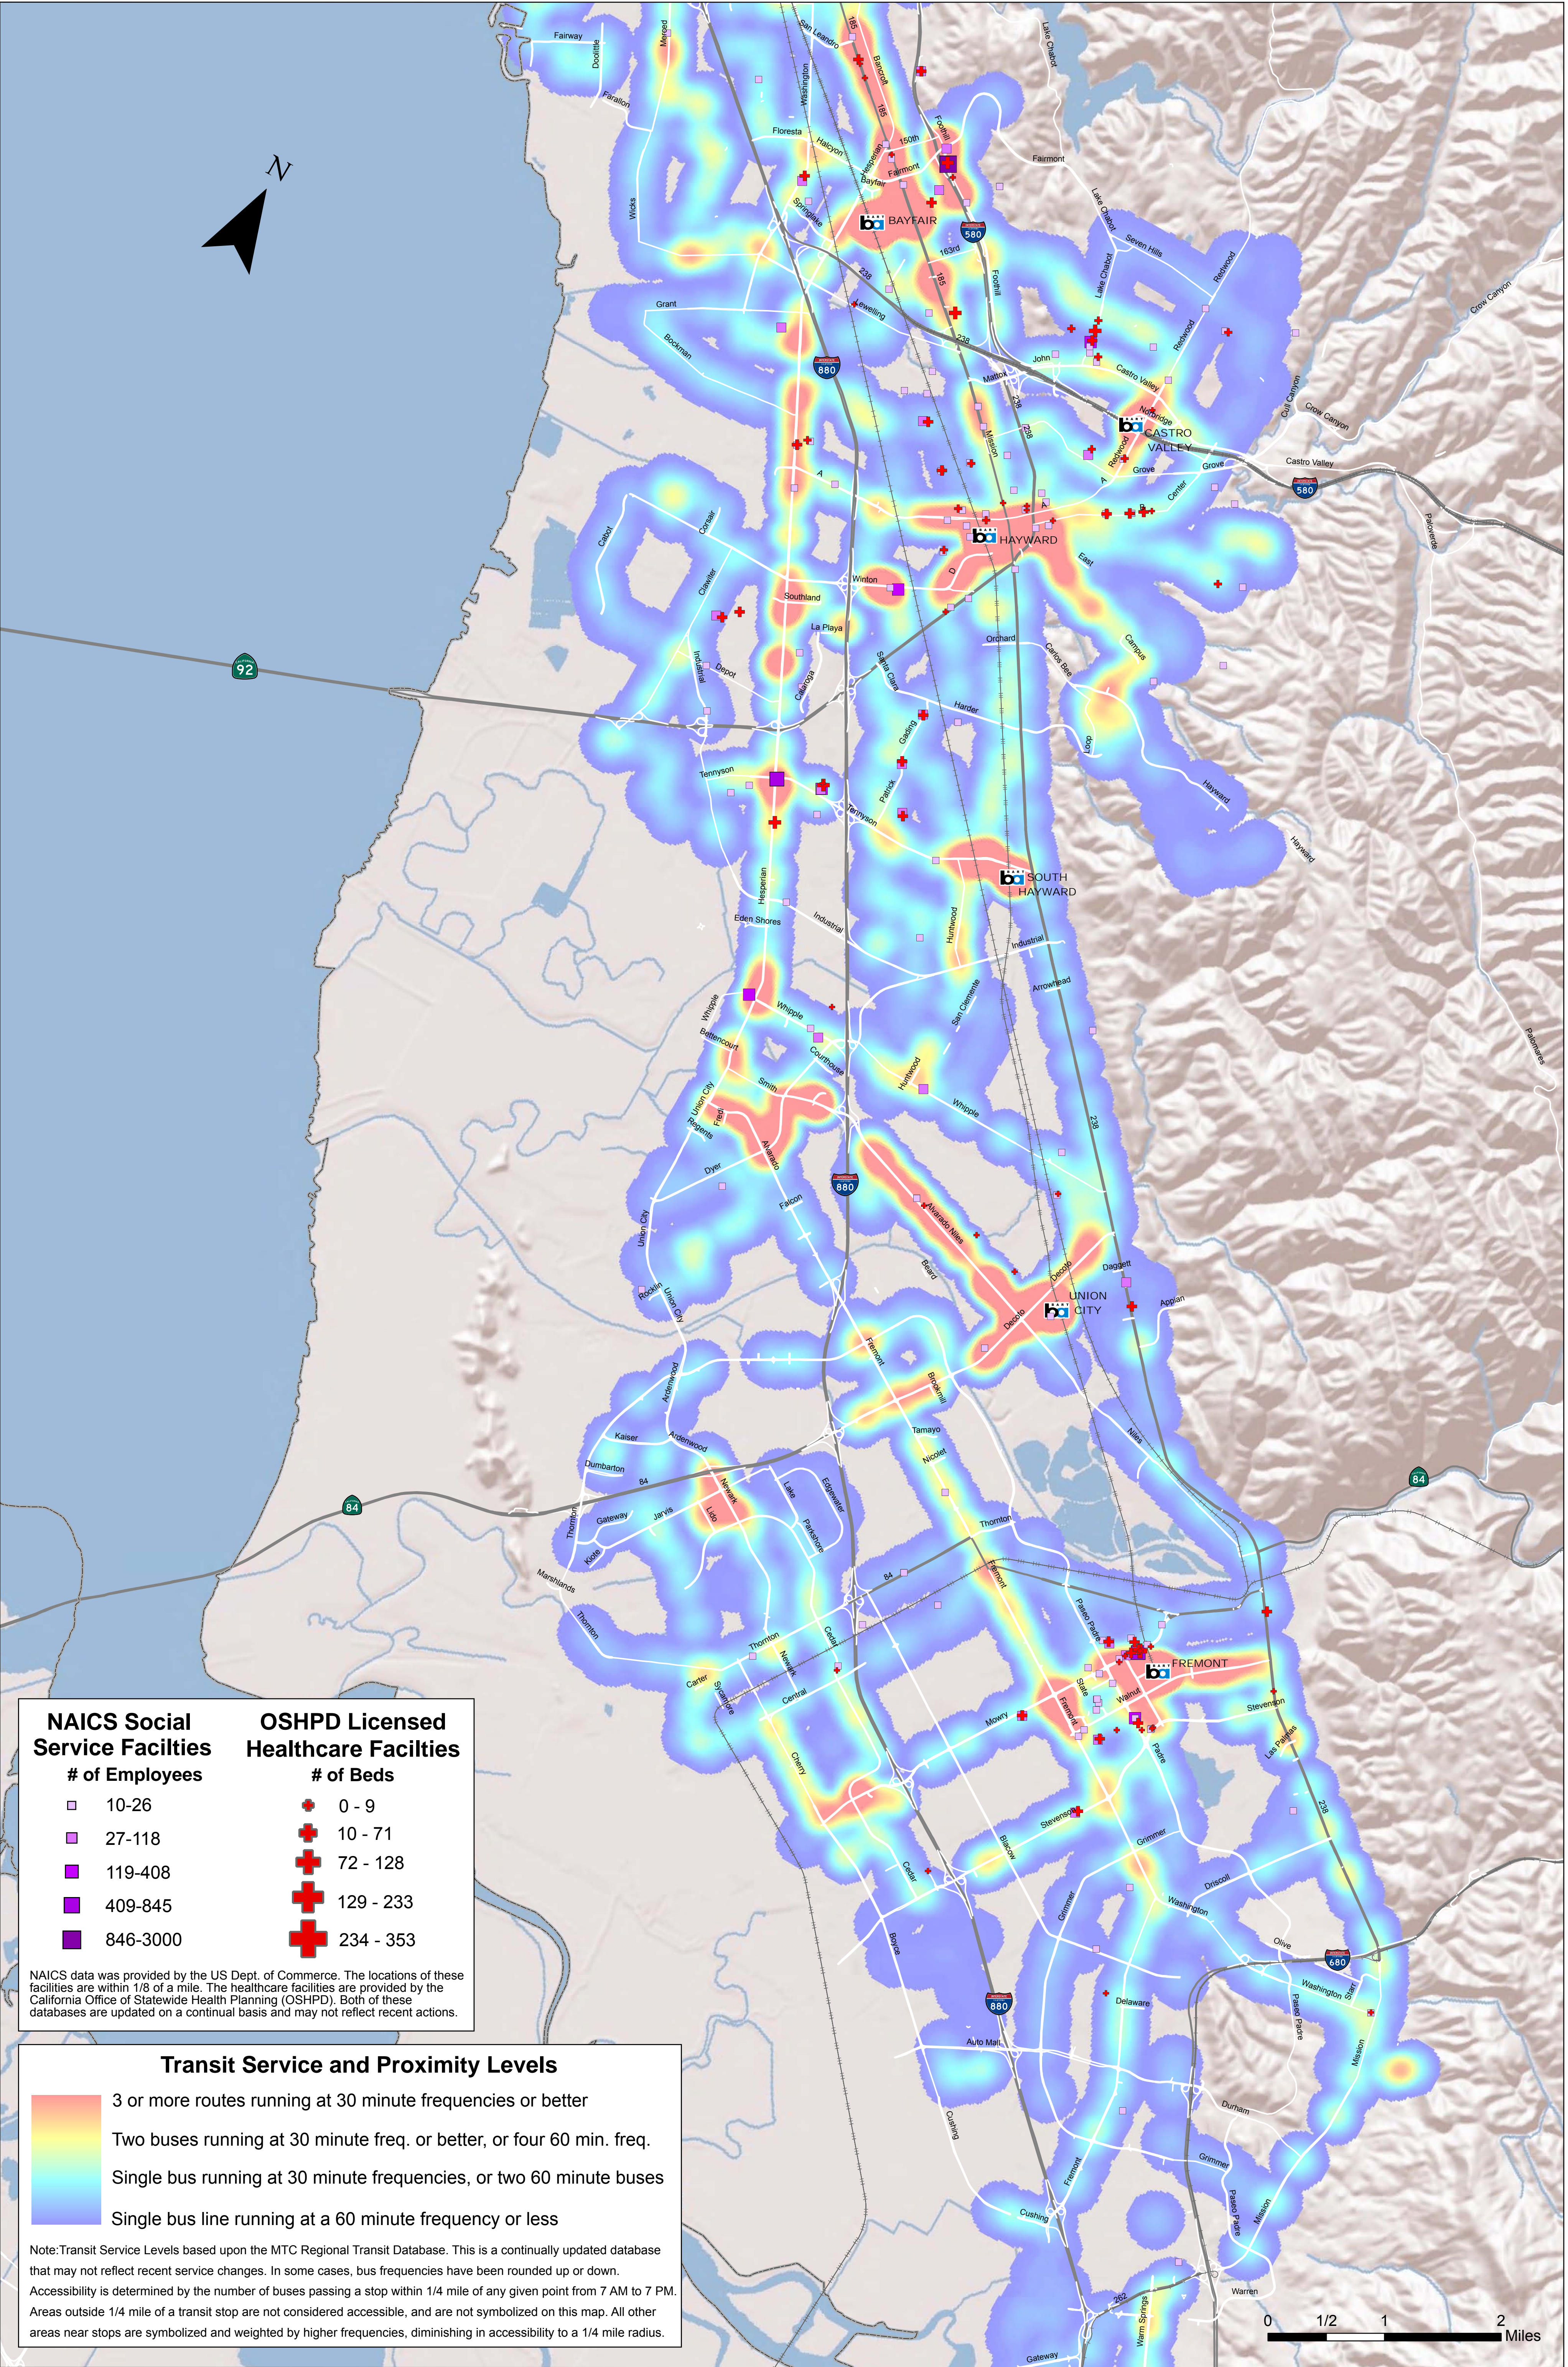

NAICS data was provided by the US Dept. of Commerce. The locations of these facilities are within 1/8 of a mile. The healthcare facilities are provided by the California Office of Statewide Health Planning (OSHPD). Both of these databases are updated on a continual basis and may not reflect recent actions.
